Penrose Dead; the East Gives Way to West
BY STEPHEN BOLES
The first time I called upon Senator Hatt Quay at his home in Beaver, Pa., I found him lounging in a room, smoking a pipe and reading a paper. In the original Latin text, his successor as head of the republic of Pennsylvania was Hatt Quay. When I called upon him for the first time, he was engaged in an earnest discussion of the relative merits of French and English literature. Strange anomalies of the mind, say both, reported to be a man of letters and without a word of French or English, representing all that was bad in politics and political connections with business that thrives on the edge of the public eye. The actual life in an atmosphere far removed from everything the public knew.

LAG OF GERMANY REAPPEARS IN N. Y. FINANCIAL DISTRICT
Karl Lang, photographed since his arrival in U. S.
New York.—Germany's lag Tuesday reappeared among those for other nations in New York's financial and shipping districts. It was unfurled from the same, farpoint, which it was hauled down in 1917, and marked the location of the re-established consular offices of the new German republic.

Court Room Filled as Murder Trial Opens on Tuesday
More than 1,000 people jammed in the Rock county circuit court room, Tuesday afternoon, when the jury was called for the trial of Henry Vermeersek, on the charge of first degree murder. Interest was at high pitch, the court room being packed to the very limit while hundreds of others lined the hall-way and corridor, hoping for even a sight of the defendant.

CHIEF OF POLICE SUSPENDS 2 MEN
Myers and Lennartz Put Off Force Temporarily for Misconduct.
Two members of the Janesville police department—Joseph Myers and Leo Lennartz—were suspended from service temporarily by Chief Charles Newman, Sunday, for conduct unbecoming an officer. Both are night patrolmen. Lennartz having been on the east side beat while Myers was relieved man. The suspensions followed their alleged unbecoming actions early New Year's day.

150 Elks Out to Greet Mountain
More than 150 Elks of the city turned out to greet the grand old ruler, W. W. Mountain, Saturday night, and to listen to his talk given at the clubrooms, in which he told of the Elks' war and reconstruction work and the work of the Elks in the world. Mountain was accompanied by his private secretary, Fred C. Robinson, and by the grand secretary of the order, Mr. Messtle.

Hot Battle Is Staged at Trial of Pete Fisher
Kenosha, Wis.—The trial of Pete Fisher, Jr., former district attorney of Kenosha, charged with grand jury indictments with embezzlement and the acceptance of bribes was started in the circuit court here Tuesday morning. The first witness called by the state was one charging embezzlement, District Attorney W. C. Zabel of Milwaukee. County appeared for the state in the case and Fisher was defended by attorneys, Robert Yerxa Baker and Harry Steiner of Kenosha, and Wallace Ingalls of Racine. The three attorneys volunteered their services for the defense of the former district attorney, offering to do so without charge. It is expected that the trial will be most sensational and that it will take up the time of the circuit court for at least a month.

R. F. B. Fords Defeat Madison, 21-19, in Speedy Contest

MILTON STARS AID IN LOCAL VICTORY; WOODSTOCK NEXT

Playing a strong defensive game and showing an attack that at times was like lightning, the R. F. B. Fords pushed over another victory at the Coliseum rink Monday night, defeating the Madison Cardinals, 21 to 19. The struggle was fast and clean and seemed to please the 250 fans who attended.

Although the Fords were always in the lead after the first five minutes of play, they were likewise always in danger and it looked like anybody's game until the final shot was scored. The Janesville quintet's lead never was more than five points and most of the time only two points separated the teams.

Team Is Stronger
The Fords were materially strengthened by the addition of three Milton stars—McNitt, Lanphere and Davis—all of whom showed big in their first game with the Janesville team. McNitt played a deadly eye for baskets in the second half when he pushed in three in quick succession. McNitt played a whirlwind game, counting two baskets. On the defensive he broke up many passes and showed great bursts of speed in dribbling down the floor.

Nine men took part in the game for the Fords, four different combinations being tried, all with good success.

Hager Gets 4 Rings
Hager again led his team in scoring with four baskets while holding his man, Frederickson, to two. Hager was the mainstay of the R. F. B. defense and played an aggressive game. At right guard, counting one field goal "Mike" Powers, former J. H. S. basketball captain, playing his first game with the Fords, showed speed. Bond went in the game for 10 minutes, made three technical fouls, and was taken out.

For the visitors, Cannon on left forward and the individual star, counting 11 of his team's points. Madison played perfect basketball at times but the Fords took advantage of the breaks and rushing in new men to wear down their opponents were able to keep in the lead throughout.

It was announced by Referee Hemmings that hereafter the R. F. B.'s will play at the rink Monday nights, the next game being with the Woodstock Purple Motors, Jan. 9. The Brooklyn Tigers will play here Jan. 16.

W. & J. and California Play 0 to 0
Pasadena, Cal.—Washington and Jefferson and University of California played to a scoreless tie in the annual football classic of the Tournament of Roses Monday afternoon. The easterners outplayed California and also were a bit better on defense. The breaks were with California.

Washington and Jefferson took the kickoff. Basista was smeared on his own 25 yard line by McMillan, and here the easterners started to march down the field, having good tackle and going round ends. On California's 40 yard line, Brenkert fell back in punt formation and went through a broken field for a mauldown, but Washington and Jefferson were off side and the ball was brought back.

Soon after Brenkert tried a forward pass. Toomey intercepted and carried the ball to the eastern 40 yard line. This was the second break in California's favor.

In the final five minutes of play came California's last big opportunity. Both teams were kicking for the break. The break came to California when Brenkert, putting from near his own goal line, kicked high and California got the ball on Washington and Jefferson's 20 yard line.

California needed two yards on a fourth down. Morrison gained four yards, but with two to go Toomey forward passed to Morrison, he dropped the ball when tackled, and Washington and Jefferson recovered. That was the last opportunity either side had to score.

Captain Stein of the Pennsylvania played fine football, both on offense and defense. Erickson was the best back of the day, and the Washington and Jefferson ends outplayed California.

Both teams depended on a kicking game and both played for the breaks.

Fifteen days of rain, ending with heavy showers all day Sunday, and through the night, created a sorry gridiron, where open play was impossible, and both teams depended on line bucking.

Edgerton Legion Beats Fort, 20-18
Edgerton.—The American Legion basketball quintet defeated Ft. Atkinson, 20-18, in a hard fought game Monday night. The score was 11 to 10 in Edgerton's favor, at the close of the first half. In the second half, the visitors evened up the score, but the accurate shooting of Edgerton and McIntosh, who made three baskets in the last five minutes of the game, spoiled Ft. Atkinson's chances. The foul shooting, and runs from the field by Edgerton, defeated Ft. Atkinson. The Fort team was considerably stronger than the Cambridge Legion five, which Edgerton defeated last week. Edgerton will meet the Fort Legion team at Ft. Atkinson, Wednesday, Jan. 11.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Cards Sign Baude, Levis, for "Battle of Century"

Championship honors will be at stake when the Lakota Cardinals mix with the Milwaukee Bright Spots at the Coliseum rink at 8:30, Wednesday night. It promises to be "the basketball battle of the century."

The Cardinals will present at least one new man, and possibly two, when the teams take the floor. On paper the Cards look like an unbeatable proposition but the Bright Spots have become nationally known and may turn the trick.

Levis to Play
Manager Joseph Denning on Tuesday announced the securing of Baude, of Chicago, to be Sachs' running mate at guard. Baude is a fast man having shown up well in the Cardinals' first game this season. He will take the place of Gill. George Levis, former U. W. star, will probably be seen at the pivot position with "Kibbe" Brumm ready to go in should Levis fail to show up well at center.

The remainder of the Cardinal team will be the same as in past games—Karr and Bennett at forwards, and Sachs at right guard.

Knappp to Be Here
The Bright Spots are coming here with their regular line-up which includes "Mike" Knappp, well known to the local basketball world, and Peeney, who played center for the Rot Crowns in the big New Year's game here two years ago. Peeney is a former Notre Dame man and also played with the Big Five of Chicago.

"Skinny" O'Connor, "Red" Dunn and Bill Johnson will be seen at forwards with M. O'Connor, G. Dunn and G. Kibbe at guards. Johnson is an old I. A. C. star and Red Crown forward, while the Dunn brothers have distinguished themselves with Mcquette. The O'Connor brothers are among Milwaukee's best. "Skinny" has been captain and manager of the Bright Spots the past three years.

Manager Denning is expecting the biggest crowd in years. Through the erection of additional bleachers on the east end, he can accommodate a crowd of 1,500. There will be no reserved seats.

Pinky Is Ill; Call Bout Off
Milwaukee.—Donny Leonard, lightweight pugilistic champion, whose scheduled contest with Pinky Mitchell fell through Monday when the latter reported an attack of neuritis in his left shoulder, will meet Johnny Dundee here Jan. 12. The house had been sold out, the receipts totalling approximately $40,000, when at the weighing time the local boy's illness unexpectedly was reported.

Leonard weighed in at 137½ pounds and expressed himself as anxious to box. He offered to meet anyone the promoters might select, but the state boxing commission would not sanction substitute bout.

The champion took an automobile ride to escape condolences. He refused to allow Mitchell's $1,000 appearance forfeit, or to accept expenses from the promoters.

Mitchell's condition is not regarded as serious.

Elkhorn Legion Beats Delavan
Delavan.—The Elkhorn American Legion team defeated Delavan city team at basketball Friday night, 29 to 13. The first half ended 11 to 7 in favor of Delavan. Elkhorn is arranging games with the leading teams of the state.

College Wallops Alumni on Floor
Milton.—Youth triumphed over age Saturday night in the annual college alumni basketball game, when the present-day collegians easily defeated the old-timers, 35 to 8. Scoring honors were divided, between Eddie Sayre, star center, on the Union high school championship quintet of last year, and Capt. Kauske, veteran guard, Sayre made eight field goals and Kauske seven.

SYNOPSIS

Thrown out of a job in his father's store because of failure, George Morton becomes a house wanderer for Old Princeton and around. The youth falls in love with Sylvia Platter, and when she falls from her horse, he kisses her. This brings on a fight. Morton leaves, goes to Princeton and determines on a college education. He makes the football team, studies with intense devotion and the aid of a tutor, George Bally.

George whistled. "I knew something was due to happen to Kattyd, but I didn't expect anything like that." "How did you know?" Blodgett demanded. "He shot questions until he had got the story of George's close observation and night drudgery."

"Glad to see Mundy hasn't dropped you out the window yet," he grinned. "What you'll get alone. Glad for Mr. Alston's sake. Sea here, if I were a cub, and knew as much about Kattyd as you do, I wouldn't hesitate to borrow a few cents from the boss."

"My George said, 'I've a very little of my own. I'll use that.'"

He had, perhaps, two hundred dollars in the bank at Princeton. He drew a check without hesitation and followed Blodgett's advice. He had commenced to speculate without risk. Several times after that Blodgett jerked out similar advice, usually commencing with "You ought to see Mr. Alston think of go and go."

And usually George would give him a little more of his own. "I'll use that."

There was no response to the impatient knocking on the heavy doors of the Adams Express company's building near the Union station, one night in the middle of winter. There stood the train, with the usual bustle and clamor preparatory to departure, but the express clerk and his assistants had not made their appearance.

"Bang! Bang! Bang!" This time John Grossman, the express messenger, knocked harder than ever for it was beginning to dawn upon him that something must be wrong. A moment later he tried the knob of the door. To his amazement it turned easily and he stepped forward into a dark, empty room.

Boxes and packages until he reached the gas jet in the center of the room. Papers and parcels lay in wild confusion all over the floor, the floor of the room being covered with debris. His assistant were lying in one corner, in a sort of stupor.

It was evident that the two men had been chloroformed—the sickening odor of the drug still permeated the room—and that the company had been robbed—in spite of the fact that hundreds of people had been just outside the building all evening.

These circumstances, coupled with the fact that $40,000 was missing from the safe, were all that Allan Pinkerton had to work upon when he reached Columbus the following morning.

The details of the robbery were obtained directly from John Barker, the express clerk.

According to Barker, he and his assistant were stretched out on two cots, as usual about 10 o'clock in the evening, taking a nap before going on duty on the train which was to leave Columbus shortly after midnight.

"I was awakened by what appeared to be a muffled pounding or pushing at the door," Barker continued. "Was the door locked?" Inquired Pinkerton.

"It was—and bolted. I didn't pay any attention to the matter because, while we did have $72,000 in the safe—$32,000 of it in revenue stamps—we had often guarded a good deal more. I thought the noise had been made by some one who had stumbled against the door in the darkness. Then, before I got really awake, I heard the bolt move and the door was pushed open. I saw two men, one with a gun, and the other with a knife, and I caught a whiff of something which I recognized as chloroform. I struggled, but it was useless. When I was again conscious, the messenger was bending over me, and the whole place looked like a cyclone had struck it. The $40,000 in cash was gone, but they had overlooked or deliberately left the $32,000 in stamps."

Pinkerton made no comment at the time, but continued his examination of the room where the robbery had taken place. A careful scrutiny of the door revealed two interesting facts: The bolt had been bent, as if it had been in place when the door was forced, but it was bent far more than was necessary to secure an entrance to the room and there were no scratches or other signs of violence on the outside of the door.

employer a reasonable forecast. Because of these discreet hints his balance grew, and finally one day announced that his salary had been raised ten dollars.

All that, however, was the brighter side. Often during those hot, heavy nights, while he paced together the day's complicated pattern, George envied the fortunates who could play away from pavements and baking walls. He found himself counting the days until he would go back to Princeton, and to Betty's charm; but even that prospect was shadowed by his doubt as to how he would emerge from the club tangle.

He didn't meet Sylvia, but one day he saw Old Princeton stop from an automobile and enter the marble temple where he was accustomed to sacrifice corporations and people to the gods of his pocketbook. The great man used a heavy stick and climbed the steps rather slowly, flanked by obsequious underlings, gaped at by a crowd, buzzing and ever-impressed. Somewhere, George couldn't fancy Blodgett with the gossamer—it was too delightfully bred.

He peered in the automobile, but of course Sylvia wasn't there, nor, he said, did he meet Sylvia, but one day he saw Old Princeton stop from an automobile and enter the marble temple where he was accustomed to sacrifice corporations and people to the gods of his pocketbook. The great man used a heavy stick and climbed the steps rather slowly, flanked by obsequious underlings, gaped at by a crowd, buzzing and ever-impressed. Somewhere, George couldn't fancy Blodgett with the gossamer—it was too delightfully bred.

"I'll see her this fall," he told himself, and next winter. "I'll start to do what I and I would."

As far as Wall street was concerned, Blodgett evidently agreed with him. "I can put up with you next summer," he said at parting. "I'll write Mr. Alston you're fit for something besides football."

Mundy displayed a pastoral sadness. "You ought to stay right here," he said. "College is all right if you don't want to amount to a hill of beans. It's rotten for making money."

Nevertheless, he agreed to send George a weekly letter, giving him news to what was going on among the money makers. They all made him feel even in that rushing place his exit had caused a perceptible ripple.

XXII The smallness, the untidiness, the pure joy of Saul's study! The tutor ran his hand over George's muscles.

"You're looking older and a good deal wiser," he said, "but thank God you're still hard."

Mrs. Bally sat there, too. They were both anxious for his experiences, yet when he had told them everything he sensed a reservation in their praise.

"I think I should turn my share of the laundry back," he said, defiantly. "I've something like three thousand dollars in it."

"Does it make you feel very rich?" Mrs. Bally asked. He laughed.

"It's a fine start, but I won't need half a lot to get through the winter," he said. "I'll light the pipe, stretched his legs, and pondered."

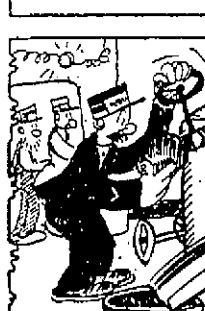

"You've given the laundry up," he said, finally, "because—because it's a service?"

Allan Pinkerton's Record Case

Case

There was no response to the impatient knocking on the heavy doors of the Adams Express company's building near the Union station, one night in the middle of winter. There stood the train, with the usual bustle and clamor preparatory to departure, but the express clerk and his assistants had not made their appearance.

"Bang! Bang! Bang!" This time John Grossman, the express messenger, knocked harder than ever for it was beginning to dawn upon him that something must be wrong. A moment later he tried the knob of the door. To his amazement it turned easily and he stepped forward into a dark, empty room.

Boxes and packages until he reached the gas jet in the center of the room. Papers and parcels lay in wild confusion all over the floor, the floor of the room being covered with debris. His assistant were lying in one corner, in a sort of stupor.

It was evident that the two men had been chloroformed—the sickening odor of the drug still permeated the room—and that the company had been robbed—in spite of the fact that hundreds of people had been just outside the building all evening.

These circumstances, coupled with the fact that $40,000 was missing from the safe, were all that Allan Pinkerton had to work upon when he reached Columbus the following morning.

The details of the robbery were obtained directly from John Barker, the express clerk.

According to Barker, he and his assistant were stretched out on two cots, as usual about 10 o'clock in the evening, taking a nap before going on duty on the train which was to leave Columbus shortly after midnight.

"I was awakened by what appeared to be a muffled pounding or pushing at the door," Barker continued. "Was the door locked?" Inquired Pinkerton.

"It was—and bolted. I didn't pay any attention to the matter because, while we did have $72,000 in the safe—$32,000 of it in revenue stamps—we had often guarded a good deal more. I thought the noise had been made by some one who had stumbled against the door in the darkness. Then, before I got really awake, I heard the bolt move and the door was pushed open. I saw two men, one with a gun, and the other with a knife, and I caught a whiff of something which I recognized as chloroform. I struggled, but it was useless. When I was again conscious, the messenger was bending over me, and the whole place looked like a cyclone had struck it. The $40,000 in cash was gone, but they had overlooked or deliberately left the $32,000 in stamps."

Pinkerton made no comment at the time, but continued his examination of the room where the robbery had taken place. A careful scrutiny of the door revealed two interesting facts: The bolt had been bent, as if it had been in place when the door was forced, but it was bent far more than was necessary to secure an entrance to the room and there were no scratches or other signs of violence on the outside of the door.

All the evidence appeared to point to the fact that the job had been handled from the inside and Pinkerton immediately ordered the arrest of Barker and his assistant. The two men protested their innocence.

Upon looking into Barker's antecedents, Pinkerton found that the express clerk had a brother living in Chicago, a man who was reputed to be quite wealthy and whom Barker stated would willingly go on his bail if permitted to do so. But the Chicago branch of the Pinkerton agency reported that the other Barker was not only not wealthy, but was prominent in the life of the underworld.

"Where was this man on the night of the Columbus robbery?" Allan Pinkerton inquired by wire.

"Unable to obtain definite information," came back the reply; "but he was not in Chicago."

"Call him closely, and arrest him the instant he attempts to leave the city," were the telegraphic directions which followed.

Early the following morning, less than 36 hours after the crime in Columbus, Henry Barker was arrested en route to Canada, and $14,000 was found in the lining of his valise. Later after having been given a taste of the famous Pinkerton silence cure, he revealed the hiding place of the other $26,000 and the details of the whole affair, which he had claimed his brother had planned. The scheme was simplicity itself. John Barker had administered chloroform to his sleeping assistant. Then he opened the outside door, admitted his brother, and opened the safe.

After screwing papers all over the floor, Henry Barker placed a cloth saturated with chloroform over his brother's nostrils, stuffed the cash in his pocket and left, first heading back the bolt on the door. Unfortunately, however, he had been a little too thorough in attending to this last detail, and had left a clue which enabled Pinkerton to start the two men toward the penitentiary within 48 hours after the discovery of the robbery.

"Tinker Bob" Stories

by Carlyle H. Holcomb

THE WORKERS ARE BUSY ALONG THE RIVER

"What kind of a noise was that I heard?" whispered Silky, the Monkey. "That was a noise in the river," replied the King in a whisper.

While they were listening for another noise, who should come along but Major Pole Cat. He had been out with Mrs. Pole Cat for an afternoon walk through the forest. He was a fellow with great leisure. He didn't make any difference about the daylight or the dark. He would just as soon walk forth in the day time as in the night. "Well of all things," said the Chief of the Forest, "I supposed you were in your house taking a sleep."

"I'm a little late," said the King. "What are all of you doing here?" inquired Major. "It seems to me I have seen you before," pointing his finger at Silky, the Monkey, and beginning to laugh.

"Well, hush, you foolish thing! It is no matter to laugh at. I wish you would get scared at yourself, some time and cover yourself with a dreadful fluid." Major was laughing for this was the first time he had seen Silky since the monkey thought he was catching Jack, the Rabbit, by the side of the path. Instead he had jumped out on Major and had been covered with poison fluid. "I haven't gotten away from the smell yet. Just laugh if you want to."

Major couldn't help it. He just had to laugh. "I wouldn't have done that for anything had I known it was you. After this you want to say something about it before you jump."

"Oh you just think you're smart, that's all," said Silky in disgust. "Spinach, Snap," again they heard the sound that had puzzled Silky as they stood at the bend in the river.

All the forest was alive. Down the river a little way there could be seen Three Legs, the Muskrat, busy working about his house. Every now and then he would stop and stand upon his hind feet to look about for he was a great fellow to take care that no one ever saw him while at work.

Billy Mink was seen to come out of the river and wander off in the forest. He was without doubt going on the hunt for food.

They moved slowly on for a few moments, and then she suddenly looked up at him. "Gee," she murmured, "I'll bet that boy had a black eye."

The janitor found her remains in the frog pond the next morning. Asked why he had left her out of a recent sermon, Brother Williams replied: "Everything to his season. Whilst I was a preachin' dat sermon de thermometer was in re nineties, an' hell spoke for itself!"

He had just undergone a serious operation. Then the surgeon discovered something had been neglected. Another operation. Three times this occurred, when the patient wearily asked, "Why don't you sew a button on it?"

Charlie Mays, the fighting editor of the Edgerton Journal, has a Ford. When a country editor can afford a car, who will dare to say the age of miracles is past? Of course, a Ford will probably use it as a printing press in case of emergency. And it will come in handy when he takes his dog and goes out to round up delinquent subscribers.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

No one need be ashamed of being afraid. There are some folks who know no fear, but that's usually because they lack imagination. Pending the millennium, the average intelligent person is going to know fear and know it often. If he does a heroic deed he will do it with his knees shaking and his heart playing tag with his Adam's apple. Nevertheless he will usually do it, and there lies the merit of true courage. You conquer yourself as well as the event.

I'm very sure that if I saw a drowning child I would go after it. I am also sure that if my home or my country were attacked I would jump right into the scrap and commit as much carnage as possible. But I'll frankly admit that I wouldn't be blazing with glory inside while I did it. I'd be scared—scared pink—and the only thing that would force me to act like a hero would be the fact that I'd hate to live with myself afterwards if I didn't do it.

I'm afraid of a million things. I'm afraid of mice—and loathe cats—and rattlesnakes—and mining shafts—and being laughed at and of all Eminent Respectable People—and of tripe. But with the exception of the tripe, I've never yet dared eat. I've tackled 'em all. And I've done so because I'm not afraid of my own contempt that I am of anything else in the world.

Somewhere within me exists a Sporting Code. I don't know who put it there, but I can't get away from it. I'm more than I am, get away from my liver. And when all other snuff fall, that Sporting Code drives me on.

Hot Cornbread. Coffee. Fig Roly Poly. One-half pound figs, one-quarter pound raisins, one-quarter cup milk, three-quarters cup bread crumbs, one-third cup sugar, one-quarter cup salt, one-quarter cup baking powder, one-quarter teaspoon salt and one-quarter teaspoon soda. Chop the figs, mix this into the mixing bowl with the sugar, salt, baking powder and crumbs, make this into a paste to roll by gradually adding the milk. Add flour and roll out into an oblong shape. After pouring boiling water over the figs and raisins let them stand for a few minutes, wipe dry and cut the figs into small pieces. Spread over the dough with the edges with cold water and roll the place in a buttered paper and steam for three hours. Turn out on a serving platter and send hot to the table and serve with lemon sauce.

NEW VEGETABLE DISHES. Best Way to Cook Turnips—Wash and pare, then slice in rather thick, uneven slices. Cook in water till tender, then pour off and drain and brown in a skillet in which is about a table-spoon lard; shake around in the skillet, turn the slices over occasionally until they are browned a little (not fried hard); salt and pepper, and after placing on the table put a small piece of butter on top to melt and run over them.

Sweet Potatoes With Marshmallows—Cook sweet potatoes in salt water till well done. Drain and mash. Butter a casserole. Put in a layer of the mashed potatoes, cover with a thin layer of sweet cream and add four or five marshmallows. Place in oven and leave till marshmallows are melted and nicely browned. Serve hot.

Alkali In Soap Bad For the Hair. Soap should be used very carefully. If you want to keep your hair looking its best, use soap and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it. The best thing for steady use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.
